

Found After 22 Hour's Search

After wandering in the hills since 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he strayed away from a picnic party in Slavin Canyon, of the Dragoon mountains, about 18 miles from Tombstone, little Bobbie Eckerman, four years old, was located about 12 o'clock today one mile north of the Lamb ranch, about five miles north of the city.

The little child had not been missed more than fifteen or twenty minutes when the picnic party started the search, sending word to the city.

Immediately auto parties rushed to the mountains, to take up the search, which was conducted continuously throughout the night, practically the entire city taking part in the hunt.

Fires were kept burning all night for the guidance of the searching parties, where food and water were supplied by autos going continuously back and forth from the city.

This morning business was practically suspended, auto loads of searchers taking up the hunt at dawn, to relieve those who had searched throughout the night and were exhausted.

Two troops from Fort Huachuca were on the way to Tombstone when the child was found, and an airplane, chartered from El Paso, the nearest point where a plane was available, started early this morning for Tombstone, to take up the hunt.

At dawn a systematic search was instituted, a large number having joined the searchers and men on horseback, spreading out in a huge fan and combing every arroyo in the vicinity.

About 12 o'clock today the men on horseback came onto the child about a mile north of Lamb's ranch. He was immediately taken to one of the camps and rushed to town in an automobile.

A large throng of people gathered at the Eckerman home when the car which brought the child to town stopped in front of the residence, and there was much joy over the success of the search.

Word was then dispatched to the camps of the searchers, but it will probably be after nightfall before all the searchers can be called in.

Aside from being tired from his almost unbelievable long tramp through the rough country, the little child seems none the worse for his weird experience. With the exception of a slight scratch on the right forearm, he suffered no injuries. From the camp to the place where he was found today, the lad covered at least ten miles, walking in a straight line toward town. For a child of his age, the distance covered over the character of the country, is nothing short of remarkable.

Nestling in the arms of his near-prostrate mother, the little lad talked freely about his wanderings.

When asked whether or not he saw the fires built by the searching parties, he replied: "Yes, I saw lots of lights. Someone was out burning bushes."

Asked why he did not go to any of the fires, he said he was too tired.

"I slept under a big tree because I was tired," he continued.

Surrounded by overjoyed people the child answered questions regarding his wanderings for some time.

"I want some ice cream," he repeated over and over, and when this want was provided the little man seemed to have no cares whatever. When put to bed he protested: "I don't want to go to sleep, I slept all night under a big tree. I want to go out and play."

Those who joined in the search deserve considerable credit for the consistent search they maintained. There was no assistance lacking in any angle of the hunt, practically the whole city placing itself at the disposal of the search.

Practically every resident of St. David joined in the hunt this morning, working from the river to the foothills of the mountains. All ranchers in the surrounding country were also out in search of the missing child.

Mr. Eckerman, who was completely exhausted, refused to return to the city, but remained at one of the camps, coming in to town this morning in one of the cars for food and returning immediately to the search.

The parents and family grew frantic as the hunt continued throughout the night, and their joy at the return of the child was unbounded.

That the child could have gone through such an experience with apparently no great suffering is considered a miracle, but the little man seems to think lightly of the possible dangers with which he was brought face to face, and cuddled in the arms of his mother, was a sight that occasioned no small degree of joy in the weary hearts of the exhausted searchers.

PARENTS GRATEFUL TO VALIANT SEARCHERS

"I want to express for myself and family, the thanks we feel for the valiant search conducted by the people of Tombstone, St. David and surrounding country for our little son, and which has resulted in such a happy culmination, but words that would fully express our true feeling and gratitude, fail me utterly," said Mr. H. M. Eckerman to a Prospector representative this afternoon.

"The search which was conducted by willing people, at the cost of great hardship and at the sacrifice of their own valuable time, touches us beyond the power of words. In my mind, it exceeded mere bravery. Every facility that could possibly aid in the search was placed at our disposal, regardless of all other circumstances, and my only hope is that all those to whom we feel so grateful, will realize the true feeling and depth of appreciation that is in our hearts.

The comfort that was extended us during the search and the confidence we were made to feel as to the ultimate success of it, has indeed been an education in itself as to the sacredness of the milk of human kindness.

"Our great joy over the return of our son to our arms is made greater in being shared by those who have made it."

McCLURE FOUND GUILTY BY JURY AT EL PASO OF KILLING WOMAN

EL PASO, May 22.—Fred M. McClure, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio, and Tucson, Arizona, was found guilty of the murder of Miss Louise Frentzel here this afternoon and sentenced to life imprisonment.

McClure, arrested on the morning following the finding of the body of Miss Frentzel lying beside street railway tracks in Highland Park a suburb, on March 14, did not go on the stand and neither did the defense offer any witnesses.

Testimony adduced by the prosecution developed that Miss Frentzel had loaned money to McClure and that she had an interest in his automobile. She was not seen alive after she left her home to keep an engagement with McClure.

McClure was formerly circulation manager of newspapers in Cleveland, Tucson and here.

Attorneys for McClure announced this evening that they would appeal the case.

The jury was out only two hours. On the first ballot it is said to have stood 9 for hanging, 2 for life imprisonment and one for a five-year term. The second ballot is said to have been 11 for hanging and one for a five-year term. The third resulted in the compromise.

Miss Frentzel was a former stenographer, who was a newspaper circulation manager. He is alleged to have borrowed money from her and promised to sell her his automobile. On March 12, they are alleged to have gone driving together. That night, her body was found in a lonely street, shot through the head.

McClure later reported his automobile had been stolen and was arrested as he was about to board a train for Baltimore, where he had a position.

After a severe grilling he told the police she had shot herself and that he, panic stricken, had thrown her body from the car and fled. This statement was not introduced at the trial.
